

PHOENIX

This is a stylized architectural elevation of a building facade. The building is primarily composed of dark brown horizontal lines representing brickwork. At the top, there is a white horizontal band with thin vertical lines. The word 'PHOENIX' is written in a bold, black, sans-serif font on a dark brown rectangular background in the center of this band. The facade features several window openings: a row of five square windows on the left, a single tall vertical window in the center, and another row of five square windows on the right. Below these, there are larger openings, some of which are filled with dark grey horizontal lines, possibly representing glass doors or shutters. The background is a solid light blue, and the overall style is minimalist and graphic.
